Happy Fall from the Little Lambs Preschool Class at Peace!

Family Night

Our first family night is Monday, September 30th at 6:30. While I write this, I am excited about all the things we will be doing. Planned are the apple pie crescent roll snacks, Plinko with a chart to see which number comes up the most often, a prize from that of a pumpkin to decorate, a corn-shelling station to strengthen our little hands and remind us of the work involved in Joseph storing up seven years of grain, and a station to learn how to make homemade play dough for those who have not seen it. I see lots of fun in our future!

Our learning

Finger painting and patterned bracelet making, water play and play dough, syllables and first sounds, the preschool has been busy. We are working mostly on social skills, learning to ask questions of others, and reply with yes or not yet.

Play set and playground

Our old playset was under warranty and having some issues, so we submitted the claim and finally got a replacement. What we didn't know was that we got an upgrade in the process! A big thank you goes out to the board and one father who put it up: Brendan Schardt, Kevin Ostdiek, Nate Brandt, Stuart Reinke, David Weber, Jake Beam, plus one father of a preschooler, Seth Robertson. What a blessing you are to our preschool!

Joseph's Life Lessons

Joseph has been the hero of our lessons this month during Jesus time. We have learned from Joseph's story about jealousy, anger, kindness, lying, forgiveness, and sharing. We tried to put our story into practice when talking about kindness and sharing by making muffins to share with the workers who helped unload our new play set. What a blessing they were to us!

Congratulations!

Congratulations to the Bird family and big brother Blake on the birth of Alaina (hopefully I spelled that right) on September 22nd, 2015!
